Models for Change

Models for Change is an effort to create successful and replicable models of juvenile justice reform through targeted investments in key states, with core support from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation. Models for Change seeks to accelerate progress toward a more effective, fair, and developmentally sound juvenile justice system that holds young people accountable for their actions, provides for their rehabilitation, protects them from harm, increases their life chances, and manages the risk they pose to themselves and to the public. The initiative is underway in Illinois, Louisiana, Pennsylvania, and Washington, and through action networks focusing on key issues, in California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, Texas, and Wisconsin.

Family Resources Inventory: An Overview for Family, Youth, and Staff

Prepared by the National Center for Mental Health and Juvenile Justice on Behalf of the Mental Health/Juvenile Justice Action Network

Background

The Mental Health/Juvenile Justice Action Network was established in 2007 by the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation as a driving force for innovation and reform around how the juvenile justice system responds to youth with mental health needs. Coordinated by the National Center for Mental Health and Juvenile Justice (NCMHJJ) at Policy Research Associates, it represents a collaborative partnership of eight states — the four Models for Change states (Pennsylvania, Illinois, Louisiana and Washington) and four partner states (Colorado, Connecticut, Ohio and Texas), all working together to improve policies and practices for youth.

The Action Network unanimously selected the topic of family involvement as its third and final cross-state project. The goal of this work was to enhance the role of family members of youth with mental disorders involved with the justice system by establishing new models for improving policies and practices within justice settings, developing training curriculum for family members and juvenile justice staff, and informing family members about the juvenile justice system and mental health services available for their children.

This Family Resources Inventory was compiled to assist the Mental Health/Juvenile Justice Action Network States in the identification of publications and resources that address the barriers families and caretakers may face when a youth is involved in the juvenile justice system, and provide them with advocacy tips and information on how best to navigate the intricacies of the justice system. In addition, there are resources geared toward juvenile justice staff and policymakers that can assist in the reformation of policies and procedures to address barriers between families and the justice system and improve how systems interact with family and youth.
